In the following pages you'll find our latest products, together with tried and trusted favourites, each item reflecting the quality, innovation and performance you expect from Pentel.

As well as our fantastic range of writing instruments we're pleased to include our Recycology soft plastics collection of display books and presentation files made from at least 50% recycled materials. You'll also find in our Pentel Arts collection, a wonderful array of products to inspire creativity across many different media.

We're proud that Pentel has been responsible for the development of ideas behind two-thirds of the writing instruments in use around the world today. From the first acrylic fibre-tipped pen, to quick drying EnerGel liquid gel ink, our goal is to create products that inspire.

Quality is at the heart of everything we do. Pentel has a company-wide total quality management programme and our factories are registered to ISO standards.

We are also committed to manufacture products that are safe to consumers and the environment, using recycled materials where possible and low-odour inks.

RECYCOLOGY

The Facts

We are actively engaged in a management system to protect the environment by using resources responsibly at every stage of our activity.

In product development we use as many recycled materials as possible, such as plastics and paper. We also make products which can be used for a long time – for example, refillable automatic pencils and pens. The number of Pentel products with a demonstrable ecological benefit is increasing every year. Here are some significant early Pentel developments: 1960 introduction of the world's first clutch-type automatic pencil which did not use wood as a raw material; 1962 Pentel Hi-Polymer lead was launched (this was the only lead that did not use clay as a binder, but instead a synthetic resin which increased its strength); 1976 Pentel Brush Pen introduced (in place of animal hair used in traditional brush pens Pentel used a nylon tip, which has the added benefit of retaining its shape).

- * Over recent years Pentel has focused its efforts on developing refillable ballpoint pens and roller pens
- * Our 'Green Label' range of markers, which contains no xylene, toluene or cellosolve, is low-odour, safe for humans and less harmful to the environment
- * Our Micro Correct range of correction pens, with the distinctive blue and white packaging, is PVC-free and doesn't contain any 1.1.1 Trichloroethane
- * Our correction tape ZT54, the only 25-metre tape on the market, is PVC-free and manufactured with 84% recycled materials
- * Most of our EnerGel range are made with a minimum of 50% recycled material

Protection of the global environment and pollution-prevention are important challenges for the whole world.

Pentel is committed to playing its part as a responsible, innovative business.

The Marie Keating Foundation is now a leading voice in cancer awareness and information for both men and women in Ireland.

ENERGEL

With its revolutionary low viscosity liquid gel ink, the EnerGel formula is quicker drying and smoother flowing than ordinary gel ink, giving a similar sensation to liquid ink. Because the ink dries quickly it's appreciated by right and left-handed writers alike.

Unlike liquid ink products, though, EnerGel doesn't need a regulator to control its flow – the ink is delivered directly from the reservoir or refill to the tip in one smooth transition. That's why the family of EnerGel products gives you the ultimate writing experience!

The majority of the EnerGel range is made from a minimum of 50% recycled material.

- Apply pastels directly onto fabric
- Cover completed design with a clean sheet of paper or cloth, and press over it with a hot iron to set the dyes.
- Once set, the design is permanent and won't wash out. (If you're not happy with your design, don't iron it, but wash it out in cold water and start again)
- Works best on natural, absorbent light-coloured fabrics such as cotton, linen or silk

N.B. Even if the dyes haven't been fixed using an iron, Pentel can't guarantee that the colours will be completely removed after washing.
